23. EDUCATIONAL AIMS OF THE PROGRAMME

The Human Resource Management programme aims to train students to perform effectively and responsibly in achieving critical HR objectives in contemporary organisations. Reflecting Brunel Business School's mission, it further intends to develop students into creative, curious and pro-active HR leaders, who can apply critical thinking in taking on real-world challenges by implementing sustainable HR strategies and practices. As global citizens, graduates of this programme will understand key domestic and international labour market trends and their significance for fair, diverse and inclusive workforce planning. Specifically, the programme aims to:

- Offer students a programme of business and management studies with a specialism in human resource management that is stimulating, robust and designed to meet their evolving needs and aspirations, academically and vocationally.
- Equip students with analytical and conceptual skills, knowledge and understanding of human resource management required by HR officers and managers to solve employee-related management problems in organizations.
- Support students in understanding the challenges involved in maintaining and managing HR services and how standards are established and monitored in organizations.
- Enable students to develop transferable intellectual, vocational and interpersonal skills required for an HR career either in self – employment or in established international firms.
- Support students in developing the capacity and the desire to engage in lifelong learning in whatever direction their careers may subsequently develop.
- Equip students to explore and critically reflect on the development of their personal and business skills during their placement (4 years thick sandwich).

24. PROGRAMME AND INTERMEDIATE LEARNING OUTCOMES

The programme provides opportunities for students to develop and demonstrate knowledge and understanding (K) cognitive (thinking) skills (C) and other skills and attributes (S) in the following areas:

| FHEQ Level | Category (K = knowledge and understanding, C = cognitive (thinking) skills, S = other skills and attributes) | Learning Outcome | Associated Assessment Blocks Code(s) | Associated Study Blocks Code(s) | Associated Modular Blocks Code(s) |

Learning/teaching strategies and methods to enable learning outcomes to be achieved, including formative assessments

Knowledge and Understanding:

The relevant QAA subject benchmark statements inform our teaching and learning strategies. We offer a structured curriculum that (i) stresses the importance of personal initiative, enthusiasm and positive study habits (ii) emphasises the value of developing knowledge and skills progressively from one level of study to the next, and (iii) encourages personal learning and development through managed choice and flexibility via core modules in key areas combined with optional modules at Level 6 that allow students to personalise their studies.

Modules typically combine weekly lectures supported by a series of small group seminars, whilst some provide workshops and/or a tutorial component. Some modules make use of two-hour participatory lecture sessions, in which learning is facilitated through an appropriate range and mix of learning opportunities that include lectures, group work, individual work, case study and break-out sessions. Large class sizes in core modules require modern, audio-visual teaching aids and electronic delivery of teaching materials. Thus, students learn quickly how to access on-line materials provided and how to make the best use of databases and search engines.

Seminars provide small-group contact with opportunities to review, discuss and debate topics. They frequently require students to make informal presentations to the peer group and the tutor, individually or as part of a team.

Visiting speakers, video materials and other devices balance theory and practice in the quest for a stimulating learning environment.

Blackboard Learn will be utilised extensively to deliver materials and communicate with students, and to facilitate discussion and collaboration among students. Blackboard Learn will be the medium through which students will be kept informed of their progress; it will also be pivotal in achieving additional programme aims with respect to assessment (integrity, security, transparency, etc.) and, monitoring and review

Cognitive (Thinking) Skills:

Cognitive skills are generally co-developed with human resource management subject-specific knowledge and the same learning and teaching strategies apply. Some modules at each level address analytical and critical thinking skills in particular, whilst others cover the acquisition and application of qualitative and quantitative data.

Innovative learning and assessment tools will be used to facilitate students learning experience. For example, “Interactive Coursework” will be adopted to one of our newly designed module called MG2609 Diversity Management in Organizations (see details in the following assessment section).

From one study level to another we expect students to demonstrate an increasing ability to understand, analyse, critique, compare, evaluate, synthesise and apply ideas, concepts and theories (not merely to reiterate facts), and to show evidence of learning via critical reflection on outcomes and experience. We encourage critical interaction and debate between lecturers and students and among students. Real life cases studies will often be used to promote understanding of theories in human resource management, and to connect theoretical ideas with evidence during the small group seminar sessions. Preparation in advance of seminars is expected. We are also keen to make seminar sessions more innovative and interactive. The programme will be facilitating team-based learning and peer-learning, as team working is embedded in different modules.

Similarly, we place increasing emphasis on the demonstration of cognitive skills in presentations and written work. These skills come together in the conception and execution of the research-oriented Level 6 Project.

Other Skills and Attributes (Practical/Professional/Transferable):

Students are assisted in managing and taking responsibility for their learning by ensuring that the support that they are given is responsive to their changing needs and abilities as they progress through their studies. Greater support is provided in the early stages of learning (at Level 4) in order to provide guidance and support that will be the foundation for less lecturer-led and more student-directed learning during later stages. This early support will take the form of more small-group classroom-led work at level 4 than at level 6, an effective induction programme (at the beginning of the Autumn semester of level 4) and Level 4 coursework targeted specifically at helping students to adapt to the demands of degree-level study.

At Levels 4, 5 and 6 various modules cover inter alia methods of data collection and research relevant to business. Some work is required to be presented in electronic formats, to ensure relevant computer literacy. Some modules at all three levels require teamwork, including group presentations, where interpersonal skills are refined.

The work placement year is a major opportunity for students to learn to work effectively as part of a team whose members may have diverse backgrounds, technical awareness and expertise, seniority and aspirations, to demonstrate and refine their IT skills and their ability to perform both routine and one-off (project) tasks and responsibilities.

The Final Year Project also requires a major enhancement in individuals' project management skills, typically involving the collection and analysis of primary and/or secondary research data via contacts outside the University.

Summative assessment strategies and methods to enable learning outcomes to be demonstrated

Knowledge and Understanding:

Forms of assessment are geared to evaluate individual capabilities in relation to each module's aims and contents. Assessment of knowledge comprises formal examinations, written coursework assignments such as individual essays, reports and case study analyses, group reports, presentations and the final year Project.

Coursework remains vital for students to receive feedback that helps them understand and apply concepts and theories appropriately and critically. Modules contain an examination component, unless assessment solely by coursework is justified by module aims and content. Where we suspect plagiarism, we will follow University policies strictly, using oral examinations and software search programmes to establish the provenance of doubtful work.

Assessments are designed to appraise individual capabilities fairly and consistently. We use clear, descriptive assessment guidelines (made available to students) to grade coursework and examinations and to aid classification. Lecturers communicate their expectations clearly to students and use explicit schema to facilitate consistency of marking within and between modules and to ensure good feedback on individual performance. All examinations and coursework assessments that contribute to degree classifications are subject to scrutiny by the External Examiners.

Cognitive (Thinking) Skills:

From one level to the next assessments are increasingly designed to test analytical and other cognitive capabilities in relation to particular module aims and content. Coursework and examination assignments place considerable stress on individuals' ability to think and reason critically, but constructively. Coursework assignments such as individual essays, reports, case study analyses, individual and group-based reports and presentations and various technique-oriented assessments are used to test these skills. For example, as an innovative assessment technique we will be adopting an interactive coursework assessment for one of our new modules, MG2609 Diversity Management in Organizations. What students are supposed to do in this innovative assessment is putting a 500 words entry on Wikipedia (on diversity relevant topics, such as gender equality, religious diversity, homophobia, etc.) based on what they have learned from the course. They will take a screen shoot of the page before and a week after the entry, and write a 1000 word reflective essay.

The Final Year Project is the capstone module to assess various skills, requiring students to conceive, justify, design in detail and execute a substantial piece of academic research. For the most able students, the Project can generate work of a standard appropriate for submission to practitioner and academic journals in business and management.

Other Skills and Attributes (Practical/Professional/Transferable):

At every level we place high value on students being able to demonstrate effective communication in its various forms. This priority is reflected not only in how assignments are specified, but also in how they are marked - good command of written and spoken English is vital for work placements and for graduate employment. In order to encourage time management skills, students are set tasks to predetermined deadlines and are penalised for non-conformance.

Some modules have a teamwork requirement and in some there are group assignments, assessed via presentations and reports. All group assignments allow for an element of individual assessment, in order to recognise differences in individual performance where appropriate. Peer feedback can also play a significant part in team activities and is encouraged.

Work placement learning is assessed through a graded report requiring a reflective, critical and conceptually grounded analysis of the placement context and experience.

25. Programme Structure, progression and award requirements

Programme structures and features: levels, assessment blocks, credit and progression and award requirements

- Compulsory block: one which all students registered for the award are required to take as part of their programme of study. These will be listed in the left hand column of the table below;
- Optional block: one which students choose from an 'option range'. These will be listed in the right hand column;
- A core assessment is an assessment identified within an assessment block or modular block (either compulsory or optional) which must be passed (at grade D- or better) in order to be eligible to progress and to be eligible for the final award. All core assessments must be specified on the programme specification next to the appropriate assessment or modular block:

Where students are expected to pass the block at D- or better, but not necessarily all elements, then the block itself is core.

e.g. AB3000 Project (40)

Core: Block

Where only some elements of assessments are required to be passed at D- or better, these will be identified by listing each element that is core

e.g. ABXXX1 Title (XX credits)
Core: 1 & 4

Where students are expected to pass all assessments in a block then this will be identified. By setting the assessment this way, students are also required to pass the block by default. This will be identified thus:

e.g. ABXXXX Title (XX credits)
Core: All, Block

- A non-core assessment does not have to be passed at grade D- or better, but must be better than a grade F, in order to progress and to be eligible for the final award.

Please note: this specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content and teaching, learning and assessment methods can be found in the modular block, assessment and study block outlines and other programme and block information. The accuracy of the information contained in this document is reviewed by the University from time to time and whenever a modification occurs.
