Learning/teaching strategies and methods to enable learning outcomes to be achieved, including formative assessments

Learning strategies will involve a combination of methods to enable student to meet the learning outcomes of each module and the programme. All students will attend lectures, screenings, seminars, workshops, visits, and will attend guest lectures by industry specialists. Students will deliver presentations to staff and industry contacts; will be involved in planning PR events; will be involved in group work and in peer assessments; will write press releases and feature articles, will plan PR campaigns; will use on-line resources such as blogs and social media.

Self-study: This is crucial to the discipline of Screen Media studies at all levels, but increasingly so at PG level. The balance between class contact time and self-study is crucial in the development of students as intellectually confident and self-reflexive thinkers capable of meeting the demanding learning outcomes of the programme. Critical thinking requires intellectual confidence and independence. A high proportion of the students' time will therefore be taken with preparations for their lectures, seminars and workshops, on their own or in groups independently of the tutor.

Personal learning: the interaction between students and tutors on an individual, one-to-one basis is crucial in meeting the learning outcomes and each module is designed with a block of individual tutorial time. Personal tutorials also structure the research programme for the dissertation under the supervision of a supervisor who will be allocated on the basis of the alignment of their research expertise with the students' interests.

Virtual Learning Environments: all of the MA Media and Public Relations modules will be live on the University's VLE and module leaders and seminar tutors are encouraged to use this tool as extensively and creatively as possible. Staff development workshops are available to enable tutors to develop these skills, and use of the VLE is demonstrated to students during the Induction week. Peer-learning using the online tools and forum in Blackboard will also be encouraged.

Specialist practical sessions: e.g. by the Subject Librarian in the Research and Study Methods module to enable students to use the library resources effectively and efficiently. There will also be a session introducing the students to archival research using the University's special collections.

Summative assessment strategies and methods to enable learning outcomes to be demonstrated.

There is a diverse range of assessments on this programme which are appropriate to the combined theoretical and practical approach and which enable students to meet the learning outcomes of each module and across the programme and to demonstrate knowledge, understanding and cognitive skills and other attributes.

A variety of assessment methods will be used which are appropriate to the learning outcomes of each module and will include: essays, practical portfolios, oral and visual presentations, press releases, reports, events planning, critical analyses, use of on-line resources.

25. Programme Structure, progression and award requirements

Programme structures and features: levels, assessment blocks, credit and progression and award requirements

- Compulsory block: one which all students registered for the award are required to take as part of their programme of study. These will be listed in the left hand column;
- Optional block: one which students choose from an 'option range'. These will be listed in the right hand column;
- A core assessment is an assessment identified within an assessment block or modular block (either compulsory or optional) which must be passed (at grade C- or better) in order to be eligible to progress and to be eligible for the final award. All core assessments must be specified on the programme specification next to the appropriate assessment or modular block:

Where students are expected to pass the block at C- or better, but not necessarily all elements, then the block itself is core.
e.g. AB5500 Project (40)

Core: Block

Where only some elements of assessments are required to be passed at C- or better, these will be identified by listing each element that is core

e.g. ABXXX1 Title (XX credits)

Core: 1 & 4

Where students are expected to pass all assessments in a block then this will be identified. By setting the assessment this way, students are also required to pass the block by default. This will be identified thus:

e.g. ABXXXX Title (XX credits)

Core: All, Block

- A non-core assessment does not have to be passed at grade C- or better, but must D- or better in order to be eligible for the final award.

FHEQ Level
Compulsory assessment block codes, titles and credit	Optional assessment block codes, titles and credits
Compulsory study block codes, titles and credit volume	Optional Study block codes, titles and credit volume
Compulsory modular block codes, titles and credits Modular blocks are 30 credits unless otherwise stated FM5608 Public Relations and Propaganda FM5609 Key Issues in Media, Culture and Public Relations FM5602 Building a PR Campaign FM5610 PR and Media in Promotional Culture And Select 60 credits from: FM5604 Media and Public Relations Major Project 1 Core: Block (60 credits) or FM5605 Media and Public Relations Major Project 2 Core: Block (60 credits)	Optional modular block codes, titles and credits
FHEQ Level 7 Progression and Award Requirements As per Senate Regulation 3 PGDip may not be awarded by substitution of the dissertation FM5604/FM5605 for modular blocks in the taught part of the programme.

Please note: this specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content and teaching, learning and assessment methods can be found in the modular block, assessment and study block outlines and other programme and block information. The accuracy of the information contained in this document is reviewed by the University from time to time and whenever a modification occurs.
